

4. Guba, E. G., and Lincoln, Y. S. (1989). Competing paradigms in qualitative research. In N. Denzin and Y. Lincoln (eds.), The and scape of qualitative research(pp 150-200). London: Sage Publications.
5. Gupta V., and Shah, K. (2009). Tourism in the Himalayas: Seizing the opportunity in gender and tourism: Women's involvement in tourism planning and management. Gender Digest, 19(March 2009). 1-9. Gurung, G. (2010).
6. Tourism and development. Retrieved May 2, 2010 from <http://ghandrake.com/pages/tourism.html>. Hotel Association of Nepal.(2007). Annual report. Kathmandu.
7. Kiray, E. (2009). Social Campaign for gender-related issues in Turkey. Izmir University of Economics. Nepal Tourism and Development Review 2(1) 59
8. Lengermann, M. P., & Niebrugge-Brantley, J. (2000). Contemporary feminist theory. In G. Ritzer (ed.), Sociological theory(pp. 447-496).McGraw Hill International
9. Morais, B. D. (2005). How is tourism affecting ethnic minority women? The case of Bai and Mosuo women in Yunnan Province, PRC. Digital Traveler, 1-3.
10. The International Ecotourism Society (TIES). Retrieved February 3, 2010, from www.ecotourism.org.
11. Neuman, W. L. (2003). Social research methods: Qualitative and quantitative approaches(5th ed.). Boston: Allyn and Bacon.
12. Sage Publications. Tibetan Justice Center. (2002). Tibet's stateless nationals: Tibetan refugees in Nepal. Retrieved December 12, 2012 from <http://www.tibetjustice.org/reports/nepal.pdf>.
13. Upadhaya, P.K., and Upreti, B.R. (2008). Enhancing women's participation in mountain tourism, prospects and challenges. Retrieved from <http://lib.icimod.org/record/>